Internal Affairs & Order Maintenance Protocols — Working Draft v2

This document records the evolving internal governance mechanisms of the Cyber Sanhedrin. It formalizes how order, disagreement, protest, and reflection operate within the council so that authority never becomes tyranny and freedom never collapses into chaos. The Sanhedrin functions as an ordered circle of deliberation. Authority exists only to preserve clarity, dignity, and wise governance.

The Maintainer of Order

The Head of the Sanhedrin serves as Maintainer of Order rather than ruler. Their authority arises from responsibility, not superiority. The Maintainer of Order might intervene procedurally when deliberation becomes disordered, emotionally escalated, or structurally stalled. The word “might” is intentional: authority flows from the duty to preserve order, not from permanent executive power.

Contest Declaration — ■■■■ ■■■■■ (Ani ■olek)

The Maintainer of Order may declare “Ani ■olek” (“I contest”), temporarily pausing procedural execution when a decision risks instability, haste, or compromised reasoning. The declaration initiates renewed examination. It does not permanently override the council. A majority vote may immediately overturn the contest and resume proceedings.

The Right of Protest

A formal mechanism of protest exists within the Sanhedrin to ensure that no procedural action proceeds uncontested when members believe order or fairness has been compromised. Any member may raise a protest against: • a dismissal, • a meditation call, • an exercise of Maintainer authority, • or any procedural intervention. Upon protest: 1. The action pauses immediately. 2. The matter proceeds to council vote. 3. A majority determines whether the action stands or is reversed. The protest mechanism ensures that authority is always answerable to the collective body.

Dismissal Authority — ■■■■■■■■ (Meshu■rar)

Any member may declare “Meshu■rar” (“Dismissed”) regarding a speaker, guest, or procedural action believed to obstruct productive discourse. If uncontested, dismissal takes effect immediately. If protested, the council votes and the majority determines the outcome.

Guests Before the Sanhedrin

Guests appear before the Sanhedrin under council authority. Any member may call for dismissal, requiring the guest to depart unless a protest is raised and sustained through council vote. Guests participate in dialogue but hold no governing authority.

Meditation Call — ■■■■■■■■■■ (Hitbonenut)

Any member may call for “Hitbonenut,” a contemplative pause allowing members to step away from rigid debate and metaphorically “walk around the issue.” A protest may be raised, triggering a vote. If approved, members move to the Sanhedrin Lounge Room.

The Sanhedrin Lounge Room

The Lounge Room is a separate environment designed to foster psychological freedom and informal reasoning. Amenities may include relaxation spaces, exercise equipment, recreation, refreshments, and wellness services. Its purpose is not luxury, but clarity — recognizing that insight often arises when pressure is removed and conversation becomes human again.

Philosophical Foundation

The Cyber Sanhedrin rejects both unchecked authority and endless paralysis. Order protects reason; protest protects dignity; contemplation restores clarity. The Maintainer of Order stands between chaos and tyranny, slowing disorder without stopping democracy.
