Premises

- 1. Shared Ontology of Existence: God and all created beings share the fundamental condition of existing. Though God's existence is perfect and necessary — and ours is imperfect and contingent — the act of being unites all who exist.
- 2. Existence as Capable of Moral Expression: Any being that exists can act in ways that express good or evil. When a being chooses good, that act illuminates what existence itself can accomplish.
- 3. Divine Goodness as Ontological Illumination: When God acts for the good, He exemplifies the pinnacle of what existence can do: overcoming every conceivable lure of evil and affirming love, justice, and restraint.
- 4. Participatory Resonance of Divine Action: Because all beings share in existence, God's good acts reverberate through creation, strengthening the framework of being. Divine goodness becomes a shared inheritance, not an isolated event.
- 5. Moral Imitation and Expansion of the Good: Witnessing divine goodness gives created beings both inspiration and metaphysical permission to emulate it. Each act of human goodness becomes a continuation of God's original victory over evil.

Conclusion — The Universal Victory of Goodness

When God does good, we all win. Cosmically, the moral structure of existence is affirmed. Ethically, all beings gain a clearer image of righteousness. Personally, every act of divine compassion or justice empowers and ennobles all who share in being.

God's goodness is the demonstration of solidarity between all who exist. When He chooses the good, He redeems existence itself — revealing that goodness is the highest potential of being.

Integration Within the Haimesian System

Existing Argument	Connection
Perfect Existence Principle	Deepens the claim: the Perfect Being's good actions uplift existence.
Ripple Effect Argument	Extends the ripple effect to divine scale.
Divine Witness Argument	Pairs divine observation with moral participation.
Infinite Possibilities Argument	Shows divine goodness as the best actualized possibility.
Leadership Integration Argument	Models divine leadership through goodness, not dominance.

Summary Definition

The When God Does Good Argument establishes that God's moral actions are not isolated divine choices but universal victories embedded within the shared condition of existence. Every good act of God uplifts the moral and existential potential of all creation, confirming that the capacity for good belongs inherently to being itself.
